What Is Love?

Love is a garden in which grows All flowers fair, of perfume rare, Whose fragrance on each breeze that blows

Is free to all in generous share.

It gives us freely of its store
At His command whose mighty hand
Doth all His mercles on us pour
That we its source may understand.

The sun speaks in each ray of light That on us gleams in radiant beams, And warms our earth and makes it bright.

Of Love's outflowing, living streams,

The atmosphere we each inhate Has lessons rare of constant care—
A rich supply that should prevail
To teach us Love's indwelling there.

The forest's tuneful melody,
Life's sunny hours and blooming bowers.
The booklet's laughing psalmody—
Are some of Love's most fragrant flowers.

The world is full of levely things Tis His decree that we should se The glory of the King of Kings. Who died of love for you and me.

For Love is giving our full share
Of service mete, mankind to greet
In brotherhood's prudential care
That makes our human life complete

South, in the course of which he made one of the speeches at the Virginia banquet in Atlanta, on the evening of the 19th. Mr. John Skelton Williams, of Richmond, was among the other speakers at this banquet.

Dr. McAlister said that his absence from Hampden-Sidney for the past week had kept him from touch with much of his correspondence, but that the people whom he had met were greatly interested in the proposed University of Richmond. Dr. McAllister could not say whether or not Hampden-Sidney would fall into the plan as proposed, as he had had no opportunity as yet to consult the board of his college.

"The question of removal," he said, "has been up before, and while it has many advocates, it would no doubt meer with much opposition. There is much to be said on both sides, and while I heartily approve the great scheme outlined for a new university, I cannot say just now that I will favor our institution's coming into it. It presents a great possibility, however, and if the university plan materializes, our board will give the matter careful consideration.

What It Would Mean.

Miss Charles S. McNulty, of Roanoke, formerly Miss Annie Anderson, of this city, was a member of the receiving party at a reception given on Saturday evening last by President and Mrs. George H. Denny, of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, to the students of that institution. What It Would Mean.

"It would cost Hampden-Sidney," continued Dr. McAllister, "about a quarter of a million to move, not counting the site. We would need at once a good dormitory building, with dining-room, etc., capable of caring for at least 120 boys. Then we would need a good administration building, with classrooms, etc. Each of these buildings, if built in permanent style, would not come to much less than a hundred thousand dollars. And we would need several professors' residences. Other buildings could be added hater, as accommodation could be made in these buildings for all immediate necessities.

"As to whether the Presbyterian Church in Virginia, which owns the college, would favor its removal under the proposed university plan, or under any other plan, that will have to be shown. There was a considerable conservative element which opposed the removal of Union Seminary, but they have been nearly all convinced of the wisdom of the move. Then, too, a large number of ministers and prominent Presbyterian laymen of the State are graduates of Hampden-Sidney, and have a certain of ministers and prominent Presbyterian laymen of the State are graduates of Hampden-Sidney, and have a certain feeling of sentiment about the old place and the old buildings which would be hard to overcome. Most of them forget that the community life that they knew in college is a thing of the past, and that since the removal of the seminary the community is limited strictly to the college.

the community is limited strictly to the college.

"On the other hand," continued Dr. McAllister, "we draw a considerable number of students from Prince Edward county and other Southside counties to which we are as accessible now as we would be anywhere. It would have to be shown that Richmond and vicinity would furnish a considerable number of students, which would no doubt be the case. The plan is a great one and resents great possibilities, and will habe given careful thought."

Dr. McAllister reported a most pleasant trip South, where he had met a number of old friends and alumni of Hampden-Sidney. The only case heard in the Hustings Court yesterday was that of the city of Richmond against A. L. Powell, a citizen of Manchester. It was an appeal from a decision of the Police Court, by which decision Powell had been assessed a fine of $5 on a charge of creating a disturbance. The facts in the case were about as follows:
